In a day with so many "authorities," Jesus teaches with "real authority." Though, like the people in the synagogue of Capernaum, we might marvel at the teaching of Jesus, this response is just the beginning. His word calls forth belief, as we affirm the truth of what he says.

Teaching with Authority | Daily Reflection | The High Calling

As much as early Protestants affirmed the authority of the Bible, they didn't utterly reject all ecclesiastical authority as they built their theology. On the contrary, Protestants believed that God had granted secondary, fallible authority to the church in submission to the infallible teachings of Scripture.

Building Your Theology: Authority in Theology

"And they went into Capernaum, and immediately on the Sabbath he entered the synagogue and was teaching. And they were astonished at his teaching, for he taught them as one who had authority, and not as the scribes." - Mark 1:21-22 The four Gospels reveal that Jesus amazed people during His earthly ministry in two main ways.

Teaching with Authority | Reformed Bible Studies ...

The authority of the Church as a teacher, and her authority as a ruler are, we must observe from the outset, two different conceptions. When we speak of an official as having authority, we mean that he holds a warrant or commission issued by some higher power. When we speak of a writer or teacher as having authority, or as being "an authority," we mean that he has knowledge, or powers of judgment, superior to our own.

The Teaching Authority of the Church | Catholic Answers

To "teach with authority" (1 Timothy 2:11) refers to disciplinary authority over the doctrine of someone. For example, when an elder says to a member: "You are telling everyone that they must be circumcised in order to be saved—that is a destructive, non-Biblical teaching which is hurting people spiritually. ... When priests and religious write theology, they do not write with authority. When a Bishop or even a Pope writes an article or book of private theology, it is not authoritative. Pope Benedict XVI wrote and published a book of private theology entitled, "Jesus of Nazareth: from the Baptism in the Jordan to the Transfiguration."

On Authority and Theology | the reproach of Christ

The words teach and exercise authority in verse 12 seem to modify each other. This passage is written in the context of New Testament church authority structures, and the instructions in I Timothy 2 bleed neatly into those on elders and deacons in I Timothy 3. In that context, the idea of this being about teaching with authority makes sense.

In addition, the authority of theologians is being revisited, with theologians pushing past the structures laid out by Pius XII to claim authority in theology in their own right such as was the case in the middle ages. Others simply regard themselves purely as academics not in the service of any institution.

Magisterium - Wikipedia

Some churches have women regularly preach at their corporate gatherings. They skirt 1 Timothy 2:12 by saying the women are teaching under the authority of the church-fathers. In my mind, this is highly inadvisable. In my marriage, I would refuse if my husband told me to do something that was clearly against Scripture.
